OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 1, 1881.

There is rejoicing to-day in the palaces of the Corcorans, the Blaines and the Camerons, in the fashionable West End, and also in the negro hovels on Virginia avenue. The President will not veto the bill for the reclamation of the Potomac swamps—the insidious malaria that penetrates like the White House and the hovel is to be scotched. The only obstacle in the way of the absolute perfection of the Capital is to be dug up and made to smile with trees and flowers and lakes. It is believed that the plan prepared by the late Major Twining will be substantially followed. The space north of the railroad bridge will not be completely filled in but will be arranged in parks with lakelets and fountains as a continuation of the Smithsonian, Agricultural and and White House grounds. When this portion of the improvements shall be completed it will give miles of additional purposes. The money appropriated now will probably be used in building the bulkhead. A board of engineers will be conveyed to exactly establish the line of the bulkhead and when this is done the work will be commenced. Although for many years the necessity of some action looking to the improvement of the river front was felt, yet it was not until 1872 that any vigorous movement by Congress to accomplish this was made; and the report of the board of survey, ordered by the act of March 5 of that year, set forth in emphatic terms the necessity for the work as a sanitary measure, and its advantages to the city in a commercial point of view. When that report was referred to the House District Committee that body entered upon an investigation and was at once beset by a host of those who were opposed to the improvements of the District that were then progressing and the protests of the number who claimed to own the flats defeated all driving privileges, and will make that section one of the most beautiful parts of the city. Below the Long Bridge a winter basin will be formed of the present Washington channel which will be ample to accommodate the commerce of this city, and the point to be filled up between the extension of Fourteenth street and the western boundary of this basin will form a peninsula extending from Maryland avenue to opposite the arsenal and will be laid out for building any appropriation save a pitiful sum $50,000, which was of no earthly use save as a recognition that

Better Than Ever.

The California Spirit of the Times, referring to our Fair, says:

There are better prospects for the coming Agricultural Fair than ever before; so encouraging, in fact, that the result will surpass all previous meetings. The citizens of the State generally, and particularly Reno, are taking an unusual interest in the matter, and have offered a long list of special premiums in all classes. It is the intention to make the Pavilion a particular attraction this year; and exhibitors from abroad who desire to exhibit products or manufactures of any kind will be given the best possible space and the most courteous treatment. The Ladies' Tournament, on Wednesday and Friday of the Fair week, will be a splendid attraction. On Thursday a military parade will take place, for which several companies are preparing. The speed programme is a very attractive one, embracing 18 races—10 being running races and 8 trotting races. The purses and money added and hung up amount in all to nearly $8,000—all entries to running races to close September 1—weights announced September 5—declaration September 25. All entries to trotting races close September 10, at 9 o'clock P. M., with the Secretary, at Reno. We shall refer to this programme again.

The Nevada Fair.

The Sacramento Record-Union has the following kind words for our coming Fair:

The ninth annual fair of the State of Nevada opens at Reno October 2d. The local papers say the prospect is good for an excellent exposition. California has such close commercial relations with the Silver State that her citizens should feel it a duty to encourage the Nevada people in all proper ways to make her annual exhibit of the industries and products of the State a success. Heretofore California has been very fairly represented in these annual fairs. This year the hope is expressed that our State will occupy still more space in all the departments of the Fair.

CALL FOR PRIMARIES.

Owing to the fact that considerable feeling has been manifested by several aspirants on the State ticket over the action of the County Central Committee of Esmeralda county, which elected delegates, the Chairman and Secretary have issued a call for primaries to take place on the 10th. The Candelaria True Fissure says "this action is taken, not because any dissatisfaction exists among the Republicans of this county over the action of the Central Committee, but to prove to outside grumblers that there was no job, trick or scheme in the election of delegates from this county." The Committee recommend the voters to elect the same gentlemen as delegates who were appointed by the Committee.

"No, I am a Democrat."

A good story is told in San Francisco at the expense of a former Democratic Police Judge, who is now an attorney down there. During the trial of a case recently in one of the Courts a prominent witness happened to be an intelligent Chinaman, and the lawyer referred to could not let so good an opportunity in which to display his wit, at the expense of his Republican friends, go by. So, after badgering the witness for some time, he remarked: "You say you are a citizen of the United States?" "Yes, sir," was the reply. "How did you become a citizen?" "Well," replied the Chinaman, "I was naturalized in Cincinnati." "Then, of course," said the lawyer with a very crushing look at some Republicans present, "you are a Republican?" "No, sir," answered the witness contemptuously, "I am a Democrat, and always voted the Democratic ticket!" The story goes that the smart attorney looked as though he would like to crawl through a knot hole to get out of sight, while a broad smile illuminated the face of the Judge and the bailiff had all he could do for a time to preserve the dignity of the Court.

PERSONALS.

Fred Levy has departed for Lake Tahoe by way of San Francisco.

B. R. Parkinson took a stroll down from Carson and now there is a threatened famine at the Pollard House.

R. P. Chapin, formerly of the Arlington Nurseries returned last Monday evening from a trip north and is stopping at the Lake House.

O. N. Taylor and F. W. Tinske of the well known wholesale liquor firm of Taylor & Co., Virginia City are stopping at the Pollard House on a vacation trip.

F. W. Merrill is in from the Antelope mine, twelve miles north of Reno, and reports everything as being in fine shape. Mr. Merrill is an old mining man and well known in this vicinity.

T. Woods, who lights nearly the whole of underground Virginia with his candles was down here on a visit yesterday and will return home this morning. He was chaperoned around town by W. F. Berry and truly the couple made a fine pair.

A Hay Stack on Fire Near Longley's

Just about eleven o'clock Monday night a large fire presumably from a burning hay stack was noticed in the vicinity of Al Longley's ranch or perhaps that of Mr. Boynton. The distance made it impossible to locate it but several and among others Constable Avery knowing of the absence of Al Longley and Mr. Boyd out to Pyramid, apprehended that the fire was caused by an incendiary and was in one of Longley's hay stacks. George Avery accompanied by a Journal reporter took a ride to the scene of the conflagration and found it to be one of Mr. Boynton's large haystacks. Over a hundred and thirty tons of fine hay were consumed, on which, however, it is stated there is partial insurance.

How an Item Travels

The Austin Revelle says "The humorous item going the rounds of the papers, about how a stranger, unguardedly chewing his hash, swallowed a big coat button, which the doctor afterward succeeded in fishing out of him by means of a button hole tied to a string, was originally published in the Gold Hill Daily News, about three years ago and applied to Bodie. Since then it has traveled East, run through most of the papers there as a Colorado production, and recently has reappeared on this coast. A few days ago the Elko Independent localized it and applied it to Reno. It illustrates how an item travels sometime."

A Romance in Real Life

Many years ago Mr. R. P. Hoy was associated with a Mr. Ellingwood in Cleveland, Ohio, in the commission business. Allevy met the former and the latter divided his large available fortune with him. To day Ellingwood is a millionaire while Mr. Hoy is not, and only last week sent Mr. Hoy a barrel of the very finest Mount Diablo whisky as a present. To taste it is to know what real whisky is.

The Ansonia Company.

Nashy has been appointed agent for the Ansonia Clock Company of Connecticut and has just received a splendid assortment of that company's clocks, together with watches and jewelry of the latest style. He has also had in a fine stock of amber and merchandise, with a full line of pen knives and Yankee notions.

Remember that the public reading room, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., on Virginia street, is open every day except Sundays and that all are invited and made welcome. Remember also that ice cream is served every day at 10 cents a plate to those who desire it.

Prof. Ring's reception will take place at the Nevada Theater next Friday evening, Aug. 18th. Doors open at 7 p. m., entertainment commencing at 8 o'clock sharp. All subscribers have received an invitation ticket, those not having tickets will be charged twenty-five cents admission.

THE RENO SKELETONS

Marked Improvement Every Day.

Last Sunday evening quite a gathering of friends met at the Capitol saloon, and over iced cobbles and cigars pleasantly chatted of the weather and other subjects. Suddenly Judge Cossitt opened the ball by remarking: "This awfully hot weather makes the mosquitoes quite thick around town, doesn't it?"

"I should smile," replied Charley Campbell, of Manning & Berry's. "Do you know of the mosquito adventure I had last week down near the slaughter house, boys? It came near causing me to be hauled up for petty larceny. I took a stroll down towards the slaughter house, and just as I was passing by on the N. & O. track I was surrounded and assaulted by the most voracious gang of Egyptian mosquitoes you ever saw—some of them as large as ordinary turkeys. I had to act quickly to avoid being eaten alive or dying from loss of blood, so seeing a large iron kettle on the old drying furnace, I hastily seized it and, squatting on the ground, clapped it over me and converted myself into an ironclad. I thought I was pretty safe, when damme if a couple of 'em didn't stick their bills through the kettle, and they would have crushed me sure if I hadn't picked up a rock alongside of me and clinched their bills solid on the inside. The bloody things became so disgusted at this that they flew off with the kettle, and I fled to town as fast as my portly form would allow. Of course I had to pay for the kettle or else stand trial for petty larceny."

"That was pretty tough experience," remarked General Evans, "but talking about mosquitoes, why, I've seen those big gallinippers in the Western States go around in the hayfields and pick up a grindstone and pack it all day long."

"I had a more dangerous experience than your's, Charley," said old Nels Hammond, "away in the early days of California. You know how the climate will change suddenly in some of those mountain valleys. Well, one day I was out hunting, when I came to a pond. Feeling tired and hot I peeled off, and was having a nice time, when all of a sudden a storm freshet came along and lifted the shores of that pond so that it was about the size of Lake Tahoe, with me in the middle of it. After swimming a couple of hours I became tired and disgusted, so I started in to float on my back (for I am very buoyant) and fell asleep. The current carried me along down the outlet about seven or eight miles, and the chances are would have taken me to the American river, when it happened that a piece of brush or something scratched my face and awoke me, so I grasped it and succeeded in getting ashore. I found a farm house near by and stole some clothes off a clothesline, and would you believe it, while I was pondering how to get back to where my own clothes and gun fixings were, a blizzard came up so cold that I borrowed a pair of skates and skated all the way back to my traps."

"Pretty good," said Bob Hoy. "That reminds me of once when I was out shooting in Central Africa. I came upon a turkey and a deer browsing close together. Now I had only one barrel to my gun, and was afraid if I fired at either of them the other would escape. Suddenly a happy thought struck me. I clapped an extra long half way down the muzzle of my gun and fired first at the turkey and a twinkling after at the deer, and, would you believe it, laid 'em both low. It was one of the prettiest combination shots I ever saw made."

"I'll tell you what happened to me about seventy years ago," remarked Judge Young, settling himself back as though about to try a vag case. "I was out shooting in one of the central departments of France with one of those confounded furrin guns, when a beautiful young lady happened along and remarked to me in French 'how I was carrying myself,' and all that sort of thing. Of course I speak the language like a native, so we were soon having a charming confab. Suddenly a squirrel dashed out of his hole a few yds. off, and I let fly at him and cut him completely in two, when I'll be vagg'd if half of him didn't make up a tree, while his hind quarters rushed back to the hole. I can show you the hole, boys, sometime or other, should we ever make another tour to Europe?"

"Oh, pshaw, that's nothing to what happened me when I was fighting Indians down in Arizona, with General Crook as my 'aid-c-kawp'." chimed in General Higerman. "What would you say of a man who harnessed and yoked a bear single handed? Well, this was the way it happened to me. We travelled with a large wagon, with quite a long tongue. One night after supper when all the animals were unharnessed, and the neck-yoke was slung over the wheel, a spirit of devilry led me to grease the whole tongue of the wagon with the remnants left from our grub of nice sweet bacon rind. After smoking and yawning till midnight I lay down near the tongue, the others camping at a little distance from the wagon, and in a second or so was in the land of dreams.

I couldn't have been asleep more than an hour when a terrific growl, that nearly took my hair off, awoke me, and I saw the biggest grizzly bear I believe in the world sniffing and looking away at the wagon tongue. Bye and bye he commenced to swallow it, and in less time than it takes to say Jack Robinson Crooke he was impaled. I saw my chance, and jumping up, I fastened a whipple tree to the end of the tongue and slung the yoke over Mr. Grizzly's neck, and had him fast. The next morning when the other boys woke up they were the most astonished lot of men I ever saw."

"That takes the cake," remarked the other members of the club, after individually passing; whereupon a vote of thanks was awarded to the distinguished General as champion of the evening, and the members adjourned to meet at the call of the Secretary.

MORE MAMMOTH FOOTPRINTS

The Fossil Wonders in the State Prison Quarry.

The Virginia Chronicle says "Since Professor Le Conte visited the State Prison at Carson to examine the fossil tracks on the floor of the quarry, Warden Garrard has developed three additional series of human footprints. He turned a stream of water on the quarry floor, at the western side, where the wall is about 30 feet high, and was rewarded by more than a dozen new footprints. One series shows tracks of the same mammoth proportions as those found at the eastern end of the quarry, while running parallel with them are the tracks of a smaller man. Coming west are the prints of the feet of a man who was apparently dragging a heavy load after him through the mud. Footprints are turned sideways, as if the man had sought the strongest purchase to pull along behind him his load—possibly an antediluvian Sharanian sack. Even in the smallest of the tracks the No. 9 of the Chronicle scientist looked like a baby shoe. On the east side of the quarry a little tunnel was run in about six feet in the presence of Professor Le Conte, and three fresh human footprints were disclosed. Evidently the owner of the feet was plunging through deep and thick mud, for around each track was forced up a ridge several inches in height. Unfortunately for the cause of science, it is no longer very profitable to work the quarry, the rock being so broken that about only one part in a hundred thrown down can be utilized. Last Winter Warden Garrard stopped work and employed the prisoners in the shoe shop and otherwise. As soon as this was known Carson began to growl, and about every other man awoke to the fact that he was in urgent need of a gravestone. To supply this enthusiastic demand for mortuary monuments work in the quarry was resumed. As soon as the fact became known Carson ceased to growl and the desire for tombstones ceased. If the ground were thoroughly explored for a year or two longer it is very probable that the fossil remains of the men and animals who made the tracks would be unearthed."

A Huge Joke on the Great American Eagle.

It is not known generally that the head of the Goddess of Liberty on the standard dollar pieces is one of the most gigantic jokes on record. The Treasury Department, it seems, did not possess enough American spirit to continue the bids for the design of the new dollar to Americans alone and as a result an English engraver got the job. Any one of the Journal readers by looking at a standard dollar can readily perceive the immense self which the Briton perpetrated on this glorious Yankee nation. By turning the head of the Goddess of Liberty upside down and observing it closely a perfect fac-simile of the head and face of King George the Fourth will be plainly seen. By marking eyes with a pencil the representation will be perfect. It must be remembered, however, that in the time of that sovereign, bushy wigs and a peculiar peaked cap were commonly worn. To add to the indignity of the great American Turkey, the wig is partly composed of an exact copy of the British lion rampant. Comparatively few Renoters have hitherto noticed this extraordinary coincidence, but when they become thoroughly posted on the self, it is anticipated that they will issue a declaration of war against both the engraver and the British Lion.

A Wonderful Discovery.

It looks as though the secret of getting rid of flies in the bar-rooms has been found in Reno. The inventor does not care to make known his name yet, but he has patented his appliance, which is a kind of an atomizer that covers the counter with a film of essence of peppermint. While other houses are tormented with flies, the inventor's saloon is nearly destitute of them.

As the Subscription Committee can not see or do not know all of Prof. Ring's old students, and as they do not wish to slight any, they respectfully ask all who wish to contribute to hand the same to F. Wright, at Sunderland's, or Miss Wintermantel, at C. A. Loomis's.

The Importance of Wheel-tapping.

Wheel-tappers as a rule have not a very pleasant time of it on the C. P. R. They have to be on hand both night and day, and ever on the lookout for cracked wheels and hot boxes. As they start down each side of the train they have to keep a sharp lookout for all the working gear to see that it is in good condition. Their vigilance is seldom deceived, however, even on the darkest nights, and if a car-wheel is found cracked or disabled the car is remorselessly sidetracked for repairs. Only last Sunday night, when the tea train stopped at Reno, the tappers found two defective wheels and sidetracked the cars having them. It is little wonder, then, that so few accidents occur from broken wheels. A perpetual inspection is kept over them.

A Pardonable Mistake.

Last Monday evening a man bronzed and roughened by exposure walked into the Palace saloon and requested a mild drink from the bartender, Frank Perkins. As soon as he had got outside of it he started to go upstairs, when Frank called out to him and inquired where he was going, and proceeded to collar him. It was only after uttering a private password or two that he recognized his long lost partner Al White, just returned with Spider from a hunting trip up to Vista Valley. The wind and sun had tanned and peeled his face and so altered his phiz that it was no wonder Frank took him for a bull-whacker and rough character trying to get away with the house.

The Old Favorite

The favorite is still in full bloom, but does not waste its sweetness on the desert air. The fragrance lives in the Budweiser, Anheiser, Boca and Milwaukee beer, and is daily enjoyed by a host of tax-paying citizens. At the bar can also be had choice wines and liquors of all kinds adapted for use in this climate. A fine lunch is set out every day, and beer is hoisted upon the counter in schooner glasses. Chase & Thyes and Dusen are still on deck as promoters.

One Reason

The Austin Revelle remarks "From the number of patients discharged as cured, from the new State Insane Asylum at Reno, it would appear that Drs. Langdon & Clark, who had them in charge at Stockton, California, under contract with this State, must have kept many who should have been discharged. This was natural enough, as they had them at so much a head, and wished to make all they could out of their contract."

A Coming Race

Next Sunday afternoon at two o'clock a foot race will be run by Wm. H. Jones and Seymour Bryant for $25 a side. The race will be run somewhere in the neighborhood of the English Mill or else on Virginia street. Lots of fun is anticipated and it looks already as though the lovers of foot racing will line the streets.

Lamentable Ignorance.

It takes a reporter to find out how lamentably ignorant the men of Reno are, and by their own confession, too. "Hello, Blank, do you know anything?" "Hello, no I don't." What more convincing proof than this is needed?

Charley, the proprietor of the Stophor corner, is daily growing in fame on account of his fine lunches and excellent beer. One call will suffice to prove this and add to his list of friends.

At times during yesterday the breeze was too strong to be pleasant, filling the air with dust, and making it disagreeable for pedestrians.

A Good Thing

Commenting upon the Journal's statement of Asylum expenses for July, the Winnemucca Silver State says:

This is an excellent showing, and if the hopes of the Superintendent in curtailing the cost of maintaining the Asylum are realized, the tax-payers of the State will have just cause for rejoicing. Under the system of "turning out" the unfortunate patients at so much a head, the object of the contractors was to make money rather than to minister to the diseased mind with a view of restoring reason, as is evidenced by the fact that more patients have been discharged as cured in one month under the present management than in any one year while the patients were "farmed out." This of itself more than compensates for the removal of the insane to Nevada, even though the expenses of maintaining the Asylum at home should be no less than under the contract system.

New Patents.

Dewey & Co.'s Scientific Press Patent Agency has official reports of the following U. S. patents, issued Aug. 1, 1882:

Frank D. Adams, Auburn, Cal., book mark and paper cutter; R. Eberhard, S. F., beer faucet; R. H. Johnson, Woodland, Cal., grain spreader for threshing machines; Geo. W. Kitterman, San Rafael, Cal., egg beater; Henry Root, S. F., construction of cable railways; Jas. F. Welch, Globe City, A. T., wood planing and sawing machine.

The best and cheapest sewing machines are to be had all the time at Osburn & Shoemaker's.
